

With perfect regularity
I waken to the clatter
I'm refused the right to know
It's plan or worried matter

To let me be, too much to ask
To let me in still greater
And if I knew the problems had
The plans would fail come later

Left content though still arised
I wonder whether jest
Or one with wisdom more than I
Is what takes me from rest.